

2.2.1.3 Table

An Esri table contains tabular information organized in rows and columns. A column represents a certain type of attribute while a row represents a different item. A table does not contain geometry (point/line/polygon). This is not to be confused with the more standard definition of a table, which could contain geographic information.