3.3   Links

Linking enables additional geometry to be referenced into a model. This may be either sections of a model that are too big to manage in a single file, or geometry from another discipline or external consultants. Linked files are also used to separate buildings on site, split the scope of work of different disciplines and coordinate the work between consultants.